Topics

Reviewing Europe: re-evaluating the challenges and the future of Europe 2020

Committee on Civil Liberties, Justice and Home Affairs (LIBE)

Religious radicalisation and European society: With the rise of religious radicalism in both EU and third countries, what approach should the EU take towards inter-religious dialogue to promote tolerance and respect towards human dignity?

Committee on Culture and Education I (CULT I)

Education as the basis for developing individuals in a society: With recent evidence of high scholar failure all over Europe, and increasing critical perspectives on the philosophy behind customary occidental systems, how should the EU best structure the discussion for a fundamental reform of Member States' education systems?

Committee on Culture and Education II (CULT II)

Arts in the EU: In light of the importance of art for the intellectual and spiritual development of a society, and the limited attention this field is currently receiving, what place should arts be given in the official EU agenda?

Committee on Constitutional Affairs (AFCO)

Democratic governance in the EU: In light of the current lack of democratic legitimacy according to citizens' perceptions, to what extent should the EU use technocratic logics in its institutional structure?

Committee on Women's Rights and Gender Equality (FEMM)

Positive discrimination in the labour market as a way to break the glass ceiling: What stance should the EU take regarding gender quotas, and what further measures should be enforced to achieve gender equality in the workplace?

Committee on Human Rights (DROI)

Worsening of refugees' plight: With hundreds of thousands fleeing their home countries due to the rapid advance of ISIS, and many more living precariously in overcrowded camps, how should the EU help those displaced?

Committee on Employment and Social Affairs (EMPL)

Youth unemployment, still an epidemic: With nearly 5.2 million young people unemployed in the EU and great disparities between Member States' labour market situations, what measures can the EU take to increase youngsters' chances of employment?

Committee on Legal Affairs (JURI)

The future of embryonic stem cell research in a heterogeneous legal landscape: How can the EU and its Member States strike the balance between protection of embryos, enhancement of therapeutic prospects for chronic patients, and supporting research development?
